

FIRE PATROL AUXILIARIES UNDERPAID

Under Orders 20 Hours in 24 with a Per Diem of .
$2.15.

Two dollars and fifteen cents a day for work where one's life is constantly in danger is small pay. The sand-hog digging in the mud beneath the river bed makes more in six hours. Two dollars and fifteen cents for a working day of twenty hours is what the man on the auxiliary list of the Fire Patrol gets.

If he works ten days in the month he gets $21.50 in his pay envelope. If he works only five days he gets $10.75. His work is most hazardous. He gets no pension. His family should be met with death at his dangerous calling, may become objects of charity.

existence many years, is composed of men whose duty it is to save property at fires. It is supported by the insurance companies and pays for itself a hundred times over in a year's work. These are the men who, arriving at the fire at the same time as the firemen, run into the burning building with the one end in view of saving property. They carry in heavy tarpaulins, which they lay over goods that would otherwise be injured by water. They guard the building and all its contents after the firemen leave, and keep up their vigil until the insurance losses are adjusted.

The men on the auxiliary list do this work just as the regular fire patrolman does, while the latter is paid a yearly salary of $1,000. The auxiliary man does not get steady work until a vacancy occurs.

John Fallon, of the Patrol, who lost his life at the Parker Building fire, has been off the auxiliary list only a few weeks. Working with him and in just as imminent peril of their lives were auxiliary men working for $2.15 a day. There are five Fire Patrol stations, each numbering twenty men. Connected with these stations are fifty-eight of the auxiliary men, who must be constantly on call. They cannot take any other position, because any hour they may be ordered to fire duty by the captain of the station to which they are detailed. A bill will be introduced in the Legislature shortly compelling the insurance companies to pension these fire patrolmen and place the auxiliary list on a living salary basis. The loss of life in this branch is small, and a 1 per cent. tax on all insurance companies in this State would soon accumulate a fund sufficient to pension off all aged members.
